THE FOUNDING OF THE COUNCIL

THE COUNCIL was founded in 1923 by the late Professor Charles Foster Kent of Yale.

In the winter of 1921–22 he had visited many of our colleges and universities. These visits which followed many years of academic work, confirmed him in a conclusion which he had previously reached, that there was need of better teaching in the fields of religion. He found students interested in the subject of religion, but much of the instruction inadequate. He believed that, if the regular academic work in these fields could be improved, students would be led to take a deeper interest in religion, and that this interest would eventually influence favorably the religious life of the country at large.

He had a generous sympathy with the efforts of Churches and other religious societies to care for the moral and spiritual needs of students, but knowing college life as he did, he recognized that no extra-curricular activity could be a substitute for the curriculum itself. He became interested therefore in the problem of improving the presentation of religion to college students through the channels of regular instruction and administration.

He was unable to find any single, existing, adequate source of supply already yielding the type of teacher and counselor which he thought necessary. He therefore decided that he must find and enlist a group of young men and women, proposing to go into college teaching, and must prepare them for their work. Without attempting in any way to divert their allegiance from institutions in which they should work, he wished to imbue them with a common spirit and purpose.

The organization of the Council and the recruiting of its earliest fellows occupied him from 1922 until his untimely death in 1925. In that brief time he had gathered a significant group of men and women who shared his vision, and had enabled them to continue or complete their post-graduate studies, so that they might become competent interpreters of religion, through the fields of the literature, history, philosophy, and psychology of religion; and through social ethics or student counseling.

He had at the same time enlisted as Directors, Councillors, and supporters of his work a large number of prominent persons in all parts of the country. He had further won the prospective cooperation of many college presidents and heads of departments. In these ways he had made the Council a new thing in the area where education and religion meet.

In the years that have intervened since Professor Kent's death, his successors have been increasingly persuaded that his estimate of the present need was right and that his proposed method of meeting it is feasible. The Council now enjoys the confidence of many leaders in the religious and academic life of the country. Meanwhile, it is sustained by the spirit which he first gave to it, and his memory is both its best possession and its guiding genius.

The following statement of purpose is our endeavor to perpetuate and to develop Professor Kent's large vision of the work to which he had hoped to give longer years of service.

THE PURPOSE OF THE COUNCIL

The Council aims to cooperate with the colleges and universities of the United States and Canada, in giving to their students, particularly their undergraduate students, a scholarly and sympathetic interpretation of religion, chiefly through the channels of the regular curriculum.

The Council seeks to realize this purpose in the following ways:

1. By creating a body of competent teachers and administrative officers who shall be known as Fellows of this Council. These Fellows shall be holders of the baccalaureate degree, and shall be men and women who regard teaching and administrative work as their best contribution to the cause of religion. By the award of Fellowship stipends the Council will enable such Fellows to continue and complete their graduate study, and at the conclusion of their work will aid them in finding effective positions in colleges and universities.

2. By frequent gatherings of all the Fellows of the Council for conference upon the professional problems arising in the various fields in which they are working, for a consideration of the most effective methods for the presentation of religion to college students through the administration and the curriculum, and for constant re-interpretation of the principles upon which the Council is founded.

3. By providing for any institutions that seek its counsel consultants, chosen from its Councillors and its Fellows, who shall place at the disposal of these institutions such advice as their experience warrants in the matter of developing departments of religion; improving instruction in the history, literature, and philosophy of religion, in ethics and the social sciences; and in making adequate provision for the personal counseling of students.

4. By cooperating with all agencies which are concerned for the religious and moral welfare of college students. It is clearly understood that this council has no desire to duplicate the efforts of any of these agencies, but rather to aid them.

In its constitution and in the choice of its Fellows the Council aims at the broadest interpretation of religion. It has on its Board of Directors and invites as applicants for its Fellowships, Protestant, Catholic, and Jew. No sectarian or theological tests are demanded of the Fellows, and no doctrinal or ecclesiastical requirements are made, either at the time of appointment or after appointment.

The Council expects that those who serve as its Directors and Councillors, and those who are appointed as its Fellows, shall be persons with a high concern for religion, and a faith in its powers to aid mankind in living the best life. The Council asks only that the character and conduct of its members shall be consonant with this conviction and allows diversity of personal opinion both in matters of faith and conduct.

ACCOMPLISHMENTS

1. The National Fellowships in Religion. The Council has established the National Fellowships in Religion. One hundred and thirteen Fellows have been appointed in the last six years, sixty-one of whom now hold positions in American colleges and universities, four are in related types of work, and forty-eight are continuing their graduate studies chiefly at Columbia-Union, Yale, Harvard, Chicago, and abroad.

2. The Annual Week-of-Work. The Fellows of the Council have from the beginning felt a strong bond of common interest. They have met together each year for a week in early September. By the third year several Fellows were established in teaching positions and rapidly building up a body of experience valuable to all Fellows. During the last four years, attention has been centered in these annual gatherings upon sharing the experiences of the older Fellows with one another and with the younger Fellows. The best methods and materials for the teaching of religion and related subjects in colleges and universities have been emphasized. The increasing experience and resources of all members of the Fellowship have thus been made available. In 1929 the gathering was held at Wells College, Aurora, N. Y., from September 4 to 12. The newly appointed Fellows were first brought together for a preliminary two day "Conference" and remained throughout the "Week-of-Work." In the latter, the Fellows met in six groups representing the main fields of interest of those present, each group under its own chairman and with an experienced consultant, a specialist of distinction in that field. The six groups were as follows:—

1. The History and Literature of Religion.
   Consultant: Professor Ralph K. Hickock of Wells College.
   Chairman: Professor Arnold E. Look.
2. Philosophy and Psychology of Religion.
   Consultant: Professor W. H. Sheldon of Yale University.
   Chairman: Professor George F. Thomas.
3. Religious Education and Administration.
   Chairman: Mr. J. B. Hanna.
4. Educational Administration and Personnel Service.
   Consultant: Dr. Anton T. Boisen of the Worcester State Hospital, Massachusetts.
   Chairman: Mr. Ernest G. Osborne.
5. Ethics and Social Philosophy.
   Consultant: Professor Richard C. Cabot of Harvard University.
   Chairman: Mr. Robert L. Sutherland.
6. The Home and Child Psychology.
   Consultant: Mrs. Ella Lyman Cabot of Radcliffe College.
   Chairman: Mrs. Virginia Franke York.

Seventy-four Fellows with wives, husbands, and accompanying children, together with consultants and invited guests brought the total enrollment up to one hundred and twenty-two. The administrative direction of the Conference and Week-of-Work was in the hands of an Executive Committee of the Fellows.

3. The officers of the Council have shared in studies of moral and religious conditions in several institutions of higher learning, especially in the inquiry of the Institute of Social and Religious Research published in 1928 under the title "Undergraduates."

4. The officers of the Council have aided in the development of courses in religion and related subjects for undergraduates in several institutions and in the adjustment and provision of courses at graduate centers looking toward the more effective training of prospective teachers of religion for students of the college age. During the summers of 1928 and 1929 the Executive Director conducted two courses in the Graduate Divinity School of the University of Chicago upon "Moral and Religious Development of Undergraduates" and "Student Counseling."

5. The officers of the Council shared with the Hazen Foundation of Haddam, Connecticut, in holding the first "Hazen Conference" upon student counseling at Lisle, New York, August 25th to September 1st, 1929. This conference was attended by sixty-five teachers, administrative officers, graduate students and others interested in "resources and methods for the more effective adjustment of individual college students to their life situations."

6. The Council has established a placement register of persons trained in the first five fields of interest listed above. Registration is open to qualified persons without fee and information regarding them is available to presidents, deans and others upon request.

7. The Council continues the establishment of a library of books, articles and source materials upon the religious and moral conditions of undergraduate life and the chief methods of approach to student religious experience.

8. The Council has published the following bulletins which are available upon request:—

I. The Origin, Organization and Aims of the Council of Schools of Religion.
II. Filling the Gap in Modern Education.
III. Religion at a Great State University (based on the University of Illinois Survey).
IV. Undergraduate Courses in Religion at the Tax-Supported Colleges and Universities in America.
V. State, Constitutional, Legislative, and Supreme Court Provisions Relating to Religious Influence in Tax Supported Universities, Colleges, and Schools.
VI. Undergraduate Courses in Religion at Denominational and Independent Colleges and Universities of America.
VII. Student Counseling.
VIII. Bibliography of Biblical History, Literature, Archaeology and Religion.

9. The Council has entered into cooperation with other agencies at work upon various phases of religious education and guidance in the colleges. It endeavors to avoid duplication of work and has enlisted the interest of two hundred and seventy-five Councillors representing colleges and universities in all parts of the United States.

10. It has enlisted the participation of three hundred and fifty men and women chiefly in the larger cities of the country in helping to finance the National Fellowships and the general educational service of the Council.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Board of Directors announce

The death of Professor Jeremiah W. Jenks, President of the Council and Chairman of the Board of Directors, on August 24, 1929.
